

MILLENNIUM FARM

Code of Conduct

Each member of Millennium Farm plays a role in building our community. In the interest of maintaining a horse-centric culture where all feel welcome, Millennium Farm riders...

- Put their animals first and remain focused on horse well-being at all times
- Treat trainers, grooms, parents, and other riders with kindness and respect
- Arrive to the barn ready to learn, not only through riding but also through watching other riders and lessons when possible
- Take the time to help clean up and aim to leave the barn neater than they found it
- Support and encourage their fellow riders at home, at shows, and over social media
- Remain positive about themselves, their fellow riders, the horses, and the barn staff
- Step up to help others and feel comfortable asking for help when necessary
- Strive to build a fun environment in which each person feels included and valued

Millennium Farm's community is a special one. In a sport that can often seem individual, our goal is to maintain a supportive, kind culture in which each rider can feel like a member of a team.
